Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is not supported by either a specific asserted utility or a well established utility.

The compound of formula 2 or structurally similar compounds of formula 2 are not taught to have any use. The specification does not say what this compound may be used for. The only statement there is that this compound is a natural product analogue and may have importance as a drug candidate. Note, because such a utility for the claimed invention is not specific for the reasons set forth above, credibility cannot be asserted for that utility.

Claims 1-4 are also rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph. Specifically, since the claimed invention is not supported by either a specific asserted utility or a well established utility for the reasons set forth above, one skilled in the art clearly would not know how to use the claimed invention.

A utility for the compound produced by the instant process is not taught in the specification nor was it readily apparent. Ex parte Lanham, 108 USPQ at 135 states "It was never intended that a patent be granted upon a product, or a process producing a product, unless such product be useful.”
